In the Nursery.

The temperature of the nursery should be about 65 degrees F. It is wise to have a thermometer in the room. This precaution is well worth taking, for a not infrequent cause of dyspepsia in the very young is the overheating of the nursery. The night temperature should be about 62 degrees F. As the child grows older it is not necessary to keep the temperature of the room above 58 degrees F. The windows should always be well opened when the child is absent from the nursery and each evening before the child is put to bed. This practice should be followed for a few minutes. To secure adequate ventilation, if there be an open fireplace, is not difficult, either by having the window opened very slightly at the top or by means of the door. It is an excellent idea where practicable to have an adjustable ventilator in the window itself. Currents of air are to be avoided.

One Opportunity.

Recently a lady amateur song writer sent to a popular actress-vocalist the words of a new song which she had written. The actress could see nothing attractive in the song, and read the verses to her husband. "Good heavens!" he exclaimed, when she had finished. "What's she talking about? What does she call it?" "She calls it 'I wonder if He'll Miss Me.'" was the reply. "Well," said the husband, "if he does he ought never to be trusted with a gun again!"

In a Light Comedy Role.

Two washerwomen were one day telling of the progress made by their various lads in their chosen work. "Tell me, Mrs. Casey," asked Mrs. Clancy, "what's your son, John, doing now?" "John's on the stage—he's a light comedian," answered Mrs. Casey. "Ye don't tell me!" exclaimed Mrs. Clancy, "an' would ye mind tellin' me what a 'light comedian' is?" "Well," explained Mrs. Casey, "in me son's case it's this: He plays a silent part behind a black curtain with his mouth to a hole, and in front is a candle, and when Alkali Ike shoots at the candle, John blows it out."—Saturday Journal.
